2005 Marks The 50th Anniversary
of
The Montgomery Bus Boycott

On December 1, 1955, in Montgomery, Alabama, Rosa Parks refused to give up her seat on a public bus to a white man. This act sparked the historic protest that ended segregated buses in Montgomery and launched the emergence of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. as the leader of the Civil Rights Movement.

Scenes from the HBO film, Boycott, will be shown during the program.
